How to Score Yourself

Here is how the scoring is done. As you consider each characteristic in the following pages, ask yourself, "How true is this of me?" Your first response will probably be the most accurate. Don't answer the way you would like to be or the way you think you ought to be. Be honest! Remember, there are no right or wrong answers. This is simply a self-discovery process. You alone know yourself well enough to be able to score properly.

It is also important to differentiate, when scoring, between learned behavior and the way you naturally think or act. If you are presently employed, be sure that your current duties do not unduly influence your answers. Your job may or may not be utilizing your giftedness.

If the characteristic is never true of you, put an x or check mark in the box under Never and place a 0 in the points column. If the characteristic is true of you only occasionally, mark under Seldom and place a 1 in the points column. If the characteristic is true of you sometimes, perhaps 49% of the time, mark under Sometimes and place a 2 in the points column. If the characteristic is true of you about 50% to 75% of the time, mark under Usually and place a 3 in the points column. If the characteristic is true of you most of the time, mark under Mostly and place a 4 in the points column. If the characteristic is true of you all of the time, mark under Always and place a 5 in the points column.

After you have scored yourself in all twenty positive characteristics, tally your score. It does not matter whether you tend to score high or low or in the middle, or in extremes. Remember, this is a subjective test. It is the comparison of your seven scores that will help you to determine your special gifting from God. If you were to give yourself a 5 for each of the twenty characteristics of a particular gift you would receive the maximum score of 100.

Now take a look at the profile sheet on page 13. It makes provision for scores of 0 to 100 for each of the seven gifts. You will take your score for each gift and transfer it to the profile sheet by shading in the appropriate horizontal column from left 0 to right, stopping where your score corresponds to the number at the top of the chart. (Sample profile sheets are found on page 28 and 29).

After you have transferred all seven scores you have a composite profile of yourself. The score that stands out farthest to the right, much like the nose on a person's face, is your primary motivational gift. You will also see at a glance which is your secondary gift, third, and so forth. It is also important to identify areas where you are the least gifted. You need to know this so you can:

- ♦ recognize your areas of less capability
- ♦ rejoice in those who are gifted in those areas
- ♦ avoid trying to be what you are not or wasting time and energy doing what you are not gifted to do.
- ♦ say, "No thank you" with confidence when asked to do things that are outside the sphere of your giftedness.

On the other hand, discovering your special gifting will release you to accept responsibilities that will utilize your giftedness. It will help you to use your time and energy in pursuits in which you will tend to be successful and also a blessing to others.

Now, move on to the discovery of your God-given gifts!

Do Not add the five negative characteristics to your score on the profile sheet. The five negative characteristics are to be scored separately and viewed as an indicator of the areas in which positive change will produce a more mature operation of your gift.
